The Pyramids of Giza, also known as the Tomb of Giza, is an archaeological site in Egypt that includes the Great Pyramid and the Pyramid of Khafre, two of the largest pyramids built in ancient Egypt, and they have become popular symbols of ancient Egypt in the Western imagination.

The Great Pyramid became especially famous during the Hellenistic period, and then we will explore the Pyramid of Menkaure. The Menkaure pyramid complex consists of the Valley Temple, a corridor, a funerary temple, and the King's Pyramid. The valley temple previously housed several statues of King Menkaure, and during the Fifth Dynasty, a smaller frontal temple was added to it. The funerary temple also yielded a number of statues of Menkaure. The King's Pyramid, completed around 2510 BC, contains three sub-pyramids known as the Pyramids of the Queens. In addition to the associated complexes and the Great Sphinx. These monuments were built during the Fourth Dynasty of the Old Kingdom of Ancient Egypt between about 2600 and 2500 BC. The site also includes several temples, tombs, and the remains of a workers' village.

We will also give you the opportunity to enter the Pyramid of Khufu and explore it from inside, whose abbreviated name is “Khnum Kho Af Oi”, which means “Khnum is the one who protects me”. Khufu is known as the builder of the largest building on Earth, the Great Pyramid of Giza, the only surviving miracle of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World.
