One of the most significant museums that chronicles the history of Egyptian culture from prehistoric times to the present is the National Museum of Egyptian Culture. Included are a few objects that provide light on Egypt's tangible and immaterial heritage. Explore more about this museum and enjoy a wonderful artistic and cultural journey.

As cultural hubs, museums are important because they document our past and legacy, establish customs that will have fresh significance for next generations, and appeal to a wide range of modern, multicultural audiences. Museums serve as a community hub, an essential component of an international network, and a means of bringing local needs and viewpoints into a global framework. For these reasons and more, we've prepared an enjoyable trip to the National Museum of Egyptian Civilization.

The importance of the role of museums in the life of society, as they are based on preserving and maintaining heritage; preserving and disseminating cultural heritage; interaction between culture and nature; identifying the identity and diversity of societies; and providing abundant experiences. Museums have a great message that is no less important than other cultural institutions in terms of civilizational development and improving people's tastes.

The National Egyptian Museum of Civilization and the Abdeen Museum

Travel to some of Cairo's museums from Aswan. Transportation from your Aswan hotel to the airport is included in our package. You will be driven from Cairo Airport to the first museum we will see when you arrive. The National Museum of Egyptian Civilization, which has a great location, will be our first stop. After your tour, you may sit in one of the cafeterias or take in the beauty of the lake in front of it...

One of the most significant museums is the National Museum of Ancient Egyptian culture, which chronicles the history of Egyptian culture from the prehistoric to the modern ages. Included are a few objects that provide light on Egypt's tangible and immaterial heritage... In 2021, Egyptian President Abdel Fattah el-Sisi attended the opulent "Royal Mummies Parade," which brought 22 royal mummies to the museum's main display hall...

We head to the Abdeen Palace after lunch. In addition to the Medals and Decorations Museum, which houses royal possessions, decorations, and medals, Abdeen Palace is home to four distinct museums. The first is the Arms Museum, which features a section dedicated to firearms, bladed weapons, and the cannon square. The third museum in the palace, the Silver Museum, is dedicated to preserving the royal family's gold, silver, crystal, and colored crystal possessions. Finally, we return to Aswan.
