Price Starting From : $380

Day Tour
Egypt
Cairo, Luxor

Every inch of Egypt, a country with many different civilizations and lively cultures, is buried with valuable historical tales and many secrets. It is home to several museums that awe and enthrall visitors. We'll see Egypt's most famous museums along the way, learning about their contents and getting a quick look into our rich past.

Enjoy a trip to the Egyptian Museum, which was established in 1835. This museum has grown to become one of Cairo's most visited. It is regarded as one of the world's earliest museums to be founded as a public institution, being opened to the public in 1902 in its current configuration. The collections of the kings' tombs and the Middle Dynasty royal delegation from Dahshur in 1894 are the most significant of the museum's more than 180,000 objects.

Enjoy Abdeen Palace because it is not just one museum or archaeological treasure but four museums: the Medals and Decorations Museum, which houses royal possessions, decorations, and medals; the Arms Museum, which has a section for firearms, bladed weapons, and the cannon square. The Silver Museum, the third museum in the palace, is devoted to conserving the gold, silver, crystal, and colored crystal belongings of the royal family.

Then our tour continues to the Abdeen Museum. A palace that speaks for itself and history tells its story. It's as if you witness history unfold when you stroll through the walls of Abdeen Palace. Egypt has long been proud of its timeless architectural marvel. The palace is now a museum that embodies the grandeur with which it was constructed, having maintained its majesty and elegance. Numerous events that have taken place in this nation have been seen by this palace.

Constructed On Abdeen Palace as one of the building stones in Khedive Ismail's plan to build a new modern Cairo. Immediately crowned as 1863's monarch of all Egypt, he mandated the creation of the palace. Abdeen, one among Muhammad Ali Pasha's military generals, preserved its name and resided therein before it developed and was wrecked. Khedive Ismail loaded the palace from Abdeen Bey's widow after his death, destroyed, expanded his grounds for building, increased the area to 24 acres, and erected a huge, beautifully designed palace with exquisite decorations, already having obtained so many arts around its walls.
