Day 11: Last day at Fayoum

After your delicious breakfast, transfer to the first location, which is.

Begin your day with a visit to Lake Qaroun, which was designated as a wildlife reserve in 1989. It has a total size of 1,385 square kilometers. It is the remains of the ancient Morris Lake and is one of the world's oldest natural lakes. It is recognized around the world for the presence of marine, river, and continental fossil beds going back about 40 million years, including the massive Fayoum animal that resembled rhinos.

At the end of your journey, visit Wadi al-Rayyan, which is regarded one of Egypt's most significant natural reserves, alongside Ras Muhammad, St. Catherine, and Mount Elba. Wadi al-Rayyan was named after a monarch named al-Rayyan ibn al-Walid, who stayed in the region with his army for a spell, irrigating water from the area's natural springs. This was agreed upon by the Bedouins. The name was discovered to have ancient Egyptian origins on an antique papyrus.

Travel to Cairo and spend the night.

Breakfast and lunch are the main meals of the day.

Day 12: Baharyia Oasis

Early in the morning, have breakfast, and go to Baharyia Oasis to view the white desert. The reserve is distinguished by the beauty of the sand dunes, the geological formations of the white limestone rocks, and the peculiar fossils they hold.

The White Desert is covered in a white chalk ground with geological structures in the shape of snow-white chalk columns generated by the wind and steep hills, giving the region a unique geological and ecological setting.

Then proceed to the dark desert. The Black Desert is the source of its name. Of fact, the name of this desert comes from the mountains and plateaus that are covered with black powder as a result of volcanic eruptions that have dried up over millions of years.

Then you will be transferred back to Cairo and spend the night at a hotel there.

Breakfast and lunch are the main meals of the day.
